

What members are saying about PADE

Your Partner In Student Success

"I recently joined PADE. It is a chance to meet with other educators and talk about issues facing developmental education and underprepared students. It is also an occasion to learn about successful programs in their schools."

"PADE gives me the opportunity to learn, show my work, and network with other professionals who work with similar programs and share the same vision."

PADE Information

Mission

The Pennsylvania Association of Developmental Educators is committed to the principle of equal educational opportunity for all persons who have the potential and the desire to achieve in postsecondary education. PADE seeks to promote continuing dialog and collaboration among all persons working in developmental education programs in an effort to affect the development and improvement of support services to the increasingly diverse students enrolled in these institutions by serving as the principal voice for developmental education, enhancing the status and understanding of developmental education and providing for the professional growth and development of administrators, educators, counselors, and others involved with developmental education.

History

PADE was founded in 1979 as a statewide professional nonprofit educational organization. PADE is affiliated with the National Association for Developmental Education.
